Mother-turned-lawyer speaks November 10

CSUP 10/29 — Colorado State University-Pueblo's Distinguished Speakers Series will conclude its fall schedule on Nov. 10 with single mother turned lawyer Betty Anne Waters. Her life story is depicted in the recently released film starring Oscar winner Hilary Swank, Conviction, now playing in theatres.

Waters' presentation will begin at 7 p.m. Wednesday, Nov. 10, in the Occhiato University Center Ballroom. The event is free and open to the public.

In 1983, Betty Anne Waters

watched as her brother was sentenced to life without parole for a murder and robbery he swore he didn't commit. When his appeals were shot down and funds for lawyers dwindled, Betty Anne decided to go to college and later, law school to get the credentials to prove what she always knew: Kenneth Waters was innocent.

Waters will tell her incredible true story of how persistence and determination fueled by an unbending belief in her brother's innocence lead to his exoneration in 2001.

PERSPECTIVE by Tribune Editor Jon Heaton

Hidden influence festers...

Tuesday is the day all the schemes of the corporate world's back room manipulators will be tested at America's polls. These shadowy malefactors finance such organizations as American Crossroads, the Tea Party, 60 Plus and several other groups and "commissions" with such words as "America," "Prosperity," "Freedom," and "Security" in their phony names.

The die is cast. The Supreme Court's edict that every corporation dollar equals a vote has probably sold out this election...lock, stock and barrel. In effect, the Court unleashed every tool of our rapacious giant corporations to secretly bleed the United States, its governments, its institutions, and its people. And they don't have to reveal who they are.

On top of all this, shadowy organizations such as the American Legislative Education Commission (ALEC) provide a phony front for such corporations as private prison giants and tobacco manufacturers to write and then feed "model laws" to state legislators to take back and introduce in their legislatures. By calling ALEC an educational institution, there is no accountability for what is obviously collusion and illegal lobbying.

As a result, no matter who the winners are on Tuesday, we won't know whether they can stand up to these massive corporate interests...or if they are already on the corporate payrolls.

Bank poop hits the fan...

One reason we worry is that major investors—such as retirement funds, mutual funds, etc.—which hold billions in toxic bundled mortgage bonds have begun court actions against the handful of Big Banks in an attempt to force them to take back their bad mortgage paper. Various amounts have been floated. One estimate has Bank of America being sued to the tune of $47 billion, for example.

While we all suspected these big banks have been cheating, we really haven't had much hard evidence. Now, it is being revealed that these institutions can't substantiate their ownership of tens of thousands of bundled mortgages because they mishandled or destroyed much of the documentation. They bundled them sloppily, got unrealistically high Moody ratings, then foisted them on their unsuspecting investors.

To substantiate the value and ownership of the individual mortgages, the big banks may have to go into thousands of recorders' offices in every county in the country to get copies of the recorded documentation for each property involved.

This makes it pretty clear why the big banks have been dragging their heels clearing up any of this mess: They are sitting on incriminating evidence of negligence and incompetence if not fraud and out-and-out theft.

Combine the big banks' problem with the likelihood that legislators and congress members who lean toward protecting them may be the very ones to take control after November 2.

We have every reason to assume that—like the insurance companies which depended on the Republicrats to stonewall and thus cripple recent health care legislation in Congress—the big banks, also, can depend upon them to kill any serious investigation of fraud or malfeasance.

Six million U.S. homes are in foreclosure proceedings right now and the rate of filing has accelerated in recent months. In every state except Colorado the process must be handled by the state court systems. As the processing load increases in Colorado, Public Trustees have only to hire and train more clerical staff which will be paid for from the increased filing fees collected. But in every other state, the courts which were already cutting staff because of the recession now must take on the extra load of thousands of foreclosure suits. The state of Florida turned to retired judges to fill the demand. Many of such judges must themselves be re-educated in their state's foreclosure law.

If hidden corporate pressure is exerted to keep legislatures and the Congress off the big banks' backs, millions of honest home owners are going to get the shaft while the foreclosure process is stretched out over a dozen years, just to wear down the public and keep a few hundred high flying bank executives and their backers out of jail.

There is little doubt that the big banks should be called to account and reorganized to break their malfeasant strangle-hold on American commerce. It is also quite certain that the average citizen will have to endure more tough times and keep pushing hard to get this mess fixed. jfh

Colo. Trust grant enables respite care project

PbloHealth 10/27 — Public Health officials at the Pueblo City-County Health Department are hosting a meeting for those interested in the establishment of respite care services for families with children with special health care needs in Pueblo. The meeting will be held Thursday, Nov. 4, 1:30 p.m. at the Health Department, 101 W. 9th Street in Conference Room C on the 3rd floor.

"Caregivers of children with special healthcare concerns often need a break that they rarely get," stated Marti Borden, program manager and public health nurse at City-County Health. She added, "They need a safe place for their children to stay so they can do things that are often taken for granted such as grocery shopping or other errands, go out to dinner or leisure activities and even time alone."

Respite care provides families with a temporary break from caregiving responsibilities. Respite care offers supervision and caregiving services by individuals comfortable with meeting the needs of a child with complex health concerns. The child's special needs may be behavioral or medical. Respite is typically of short duration, ranging from a few hours to a couple of days.

"Pueblo has very limited resources for caregiver relief in the form of respite care. This need has been identified multiple times and over many years by families in Pueblo," explained Borden. "This meeting is for any interested person in addition to caregivers of children with special needs." The meeting is intended to be informational and to create a discussion of how Pueblans can work together to address this need.

The effort is being spearheaded by the Health Care Program for Children with Special Needs at the Pueblo City-County Health Department. The program, which provides care coordination for children who need more complex medical care than an average child, received a 25th anniversary grant from the Colorado Trust Fund in the amount of $25,000. The grant is to enhance existing programs and can be used on a project or need that is identified by the program staff. Monies from the Colorado Trust Fund will be funding the gathering of collaborators to initiate increased resources for respite care in Pueblo. For additional information call 583-4431.
