State Health's chief med officer to expand availability of overdose antidote

ColoHealth 5/11— In keeping with Senate Bill 15-053, Dr. Larry Wolk, chief medical officer and executive director at the Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment, will expand the availability of naloxone, which is used to counter the effects of opioid overdoses. Opioids include prescription painkillers and illegal drugs such as heroin.

Colorado's new law allows the state's chief medical officer to issue standing orders for naloxone prescriptions that can be filled by pharmacists and used by:

- A family member, friend or other person in a position to assist a person at risk of overdose.
- An employee or volunteer of a harm reduction organization.
- A first responder.
- An individual at risk of overdose.

The law protects these individuals from civil or criminal liability if they provide naloxone in good faith to an individual experiencing an opioid-related drug overdose.

"This legislation will save lives," said Dr. Wolk. "While our first aim is prevent the abuse of both illegal and prescription opioids, we now can make a life-saving antidote more readily available to people who can help someone at risk."

Lisa Raville, executive director of Colorado's Harm Reduction Action Center, said, "We are so thankful to the Legislature for unanimously passing this law to expand access to naloxone across the state. And a special thank you to Dr. Wolk for allowing pharmacists and harm reduction organizations - that don't have a medical provider - to work under his license as they are often better placed than doctors to reach those in need of naloxone such as opiate users, mothers and law enforcement members."

From 2011 to 2013, an average of 7,600 Coloradans visited emergency departments each year because of drug overdoses. Annual deaths from painkillers such as morphine, codeine, oxycodone, hydrocodone, methadone and fentanyl more than tripled from 2000 to 2013 in Colorado.

At a news conference in February, Gov. John Hickenlooper announced a new statewide education campaign, Take Meds Seriously, to raise awareness about the problem of prescription drug abuse in Colorado. The campaign focuses on safe use, storage and disposal of prescription pain medications. •

A nation without means of reform is without means of survival.

JBC funds efforts for proper disposal of unwanted medications

ColoHealth 5/6—The Colorado Department of Public Health and Environment received $300,000 in the state's 2015-16 budget to help with proper disposal of unwanted household medications.

According to the Partnership for Drug-Free Kids, one in four teens nationally reports having misused or abused a prescription medication at least once in his or her lifetime. Forty-two percent of these teens say they got the drug from a parent's medicine cabinet.

In 2014, the Drug Enforcement Administration (DEA) changed its medication disposal rules, effectively defunding law enforcement's participation in National Prescription Drug Take-Back Days. Since 2010, more than 100 Colorado law enforcement agencies participated in the federal drug take-back initiative, collecting a total of 145,000 pounds of unused medications from state residents.

"To help ensure the safe disposal of unwanted, unused medications, Colorado stepped forward to fill this void," said Rep. Dave Young. "People need places to legally and safely dispose of their medications, and thanks to the Joint Budget Committee, Coloradans will continue to have places to do that."

The department will use the $300,000 to help local law enforcement agencies fund medication collection and disposal efforts. The money also will help support the department's Colorado Medication Take-Back Program and its pharmacy and health department-based collection network.

Greg Fabisiak, who manages the department's take-back program, said, "We are grateful for the Joint Budget Committee's action and the efforts of numerous stakeholders, in particular Rep. Dave Young, in securing this funding to continue Colorado's safe medication disposal options."

Rep. Young sponsored legislation in 2014 (14-1207) that gave this program a mechanism for state dollars. This year he made the motion to increase the state's contribution to the program.

In February, Gov. John Hickenlooper announced a statewide education campaign, Take Meds Seriously, to raise awareness about the problem of prescription drug abuse in Colorado. The campaign focuses on safe use, storage and disposal of prescription medications.
